

JUNIOR INTERNATIONAL PROFESSIONAL PROGRAM

PROGRAM SUMMARY

This is a development program for young professionals designed and implemented by the ALSA Group for its International Road Passenger Transport division.

It involves recruiting young professionals so that, through a carefully designed international training plan lasting three years, they can develop their skills and knowledge, laying the foundations for a career with the Group.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVE

To search for talent and allow it to grow within the Group.

The development and training of people with strong potential who, by integrating the Group's values and culture, will be given the chance to grow professionally and personally, to take on positions of responsibility in the near future should they successfully achieve the necessary skills.

THE PROGRAM

After successfully passing the recruitment process, where the candidates will interview with the HR department, the responsible person from the department they are interested in and can be asked to complete a psychometric test, an employment contract with a trial period of 6 months will then be signed between the participant and the chosen company at the destination country, where the participant will become an employee, being registered in the destination country's social security system.

The working conditions during this phase will be those set out in the Group's JUNIOR INTERNATIONAL PROFESSIONAL PROGRAM, adapted to local legislation, according to which the participant will not hold a position within the Company's organizational chart and will not be governed by its collective agreement. They will report to the person designated by the Company, who will usually be the head or the appointed Manager of the department where they work.

Every six months, participants undergo a performance evaluation, which will allow their progress within the program to be analyzed. This evaluation will provide feedback to be given in interviews and vital decisions will be made regarding the tasks to be undertaken, training, and possible department changes etc., as well as the decision regarding whether the participant will continue with the program.

Additionally, at the end of each year, they will receive the plan for the next period, which will outline the aims and expectations relating to their professional development.

The program consists of two separate stages:

1- Initial training plan (first year)

Should the needs and circumstances of the company allow it, at the initial stage of employment the participant could attend training on activities performed by ALSA Operations departments in Spain. These activities will be similar or related to the tasks they will be assigned in the department they have been selected for. This training period will ideally happen during the initial stage of employment however, it is possible that the company will decide to arrange the initial or further training at different times, according to the needs at the time of the employment.

During the first 6 months, an introduction plan to the department will be undertaken. This plan will provide general training of the department they have been selected for will be delivered, including an explanation of the organization, activities, and roles within the Company.

By the time the training is completed, they will be assigned a position in the department where, under the supervision of a manager/mentor (normally the department's head), they will complete different tasks, functions, and projects aimed at familiarizing them with the department and the business.

During this phase, they will also be given specific training to strengthen any aspects that require improvement or support, with particular emphasis on English as a basic communication tool.

2- Development plan (second and third year)

Over the next two years, specific plans will be designed according to participants' performance so that they can continue to develop professionally and personally.

In this second phase, program participants will assume different roles with progressively more responsibility within their department, or they may change to other departments to gain a wider appreciation of the Company and its business.

During this phase, various types of training will be given to improve their performance.

During the process, the combination of the development of specific skills and each participant's personal and professional expectations will define their future areas of specialization within the Group.

END OF THE PROGRAM

The program may be terminated at any time if evaluations detect poor performance.

Once the program has been completed successfully and if the participant has demonstrated the required competencies have been achieved, the Company could offer the participant a specific position, where they will begin their career within the Group, subject to the role's work conditions, the participant's performance and skillset, and the company's circumstances at the given time.

At any time during the program, particularly at the end, work opportunities arising in other companies or international projects belonging to the Group may be offered to participants. It is therefore vital that they have a clear and determined vocation enabling them to accept changes and move to other countries.

PEOPLE ELIGIBLE FOR THE PROGRAM

- University graduates with little or no work experience.
- Proficient in English (a recommended minimum of level B2).

- Eligible for a work permit in the country of destination.
- Fully available to participate in international programs and career trajectories with international moves in the present and/or future.
- Potential to become a high-performing professional.
- Organizational and management aptitudes.

AREAS FOR PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT WITHIN THE GROUP

The areas of specialization will be according to the department they have been selected for, within the road passenger transport sector.

As in any multinational group, professionals may grow from a specific point in one of its companies to corporate roles or even senior management.

Subject to the needs, the company will search for participants of the JIP Program within any of the below-listed departments.
